The ten individuals, all from diverse backgrounds, including five countries, share the same desire to work and travel across the world, whether its becoming an Anywhere Worker themselves or expanding their experience as an existing Anywhere Worker. As part of this collaboration, the winners will work from a Selina co-working space, as well as share their experience living this lifestyle while networking and connecting with other members of Fiverr and Selina communities.

"The desire to work and travel has continued to grow over the past year, and many members of the Fiverr community have taken their careers to become completely mobile as they explore new locations and engage with local communities across the world," said Gali Arnon, CMO at Fiverr. "The beauty of freelancing doesn't only include being your boss, or having autonomy over your career, but also the flexibility to live and work from wherever you choose. We're excited to hear the stories and insights that develop from this experience."
